5 Years Added To Our Lives Since 1909

So Reports Committee on Elimination of Waste in Industry Appointed by Secretary of Commerce

Loss of Life Among 42,000, 000 Workers Between 15 and 65 Put at 428,000

Five years have been added to the uration of life in America since 1909, ecording to the findings of the Comlittee on Elimination of Waste in Industry of the American Engineering Council, appointed by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce.

"In the report on national vitality, repared by Professor Irving Fisher or the National Conservation Commission appointed by President Roosethere were about 3,000,000 persons seriously ill at all times in the United States and that 42 per cent of this illess was preventable, with a result-ng extension of life of over fifteen ing extension of life of over fifteen years.

"Even in the short period of time since that report was issued a measure of this reduction has been noted. The estimate of thirteen days' annual loss from illness must now be reduced to approximately seven. The duration of life has actually been extended probably a period of five years. "The sickness rates actually determined in recent studies," the report continues, "show that 2½ per cent of wage earners are constantly ill to an extent to be incapacitated. This would justify an estimate of approximately 2,400,000 people continually ill instead of 3,000,000."

In dealing with health conditions the reports estimates a total lsss among 42,000,000 workers between the ages of fifteen and sixty-five of 428,000 lives in 1920. The death rate in industry is given at 11.48 per 1,000, while in preferred occupations, such as teaching, it is 3.24.

Tuberculosis is the most important of sidenic and communicable different and some united lines.

Tuberculosis is the most important of epidemic and communicable diseases, two to three deaths per 1,000 occurring annually at the working ages. Ten rears ago, according to the report, the setimated that three per cent of the ndustrial population, or about 1,250,000, lives are affected.

Special items of loss enumerated by the report which declares "at least seventy-five per cent practically preventable" are as follows: Tuberculosis, 5500,000,000 annually from death alone 500,000,000 annually from death alone and $20,000,000.000 in this generation from diminished longevity; typhoid, $135,000,000 annually; hookworm, $250,000,000 annually, and malaria, $100,000.000 annually, and malaria, $100,000.000 annually.

000,000 annually, and malaria, $100,-000,000 annually.

The report warns against what it calls "real danger" in drawing too sweeping a conclusion from the evidence supplied by the death rates as to the physical advancement of the race.

"The actual physical records would in fact suggest that the present favorable death rate is due rather to a mitigation of the struggle for existence and a protection of the community from disease than an actual upbuilding of the physique and underlying resistance of the people," the report points out.

Frank Burty, whose paintings were last seen in this country in 1914, has sent a collection of oils and water colors to the Brummer galleries. He has altered his course considerably during his absence, making for greater originality. Several of the former works sent with the new ones make possible this comparison. He is not to-day so bound up in the formulas of the French moderns as when he was aligned with Picasso. He has, however, always been appreciated for his personal color and his interesting design. His pictures of the not very coloral landscapes of the Pyrences and the quaint village life of these mountains suggest a love of detachment. His color runs sometimes to a monotony of grays and browns. And though his surfaces are a trifle hard, they somehow seem to reflect the proper feeling of these picturesque altitudes. The artist, though American born, is a Frenchman by residence, having lived for many years in France.

A rich and fluent use of color is everywhere manifested in the landscapes of J. Lars Hoftrup, which are being shown at Mrs. Malcom's gallery.
